AlbeRTa Placemaking
AlbeRTa Street Placemaking: Alberta Main Street installs new signage at the western and eastern ends of the commercial corridor. Take a ride or walk down Alberta Street and discover new placemaking signage in front of Radio Room and The Sugar Cube.

The goals of the project are to increase public art, develop an iconic installation that creates a sense of place, and honor the work and legacy of Art on Alberta (former arts/education-focused nonprofit) within the district. Together, the Alberta Main Street Design Committee, community volunteers, generous private partners, and public agencies successfully achieved these goals working with local artist, Ivan McLean.

“We are very pleased to have one of the new placemaking installations in front of Radio Room. We love the artistic signage and see it as another opportunity to welcome people to Alberta Street and honor the creativity and artistic spirit of our neighborhood,” remarked Sarah Betteridge, manager at Radio Room.

As with all AMS projects, we depended on a lot of help from our friends including, Ivan McLean (artist), to Armac Construction for donating the installation work, to Canina Consulting Engineers for donating the structural engineering, the AMS Design Committee for everything, to Art on Alberta and the Portland Development Commission for funding, to Radio Room and The Sugar Cube for hosting the new installations and to the Portland Bureau of Transportation for helping us navigate the process. “We are so appreciative of the community for coming together to make this happen. The installations are so unique; they will naturally build a stronger sense of place on Alberta Street,” said Kristin Slavin, AMS Design Committee co-chair.

“Placemaking strengthens the connection between people and the places they share.” Project for Public Spaces

Chair’s Corner

DON’T FORGET . . . TO ATTEND CONCORDIA NEIGHBORHOOD GENERAL MEETING April 7, 7 pm, Kennedy School Community Room. We need YOU there. This is your neighborhood! We will be reviewing our latest efforts and campaigns, issues, successes, failures and need as presented by individual Board Members and/or Committee Chairs as well as representatives from Concordia College, Portland Mayor’s office and Police Department. This will be an opportunity to see how your Board is doing and what all of us can do to enhance effectiveness. So come prepared to raise your hand with questions, to provide ideas or to become involved in positive change.

As Chair, I set the agenda for each meeting and to write to you each month in the "Chair’s Corner". Although I lead the meetings, I have no vote in Board decisions. In setting the agenda, I attempt to give priority to issues and your neighborhoods consider most important . . . but are important to you.

Typically, a topic comes to the Board’s attention by someone who makes a presentation during the first part of each meeting reserved for public comment (limited to 3 minutes/speaker). Those public concerns can sometimes be resolved by simply providing information or referring to the appropriate party. Before coming before the Board, the issue will be taken under consideration by one of the committees dedicated to the subject (i.e. Land use, Livability, etc). We are inside page of the Concordia news for more). The Committee then makes recommendations to the Board for discussion, possible further investigation and then decision.

Lately there has been a marked disconnect between Committee recommendations and Board voting results, and I have been wondering why. It seems that everyone is doing their best to represent what they believe the community wants. However, we are arriving at two different conclusions. I think that, while we are trying to act impartially and respect all points of view, we are often making a tactical approach to decision making because of the very limited input from you, our neighbors. In many cases, we are taking no action at all just to be on the “safe” side.

Being the “Silent Majority” is a sure way of getting nowhere. The alternative is to have a few “wieners” (as in Neighborhood wien) make assumptions out of their power to read the minds of the constituency. This is NOT GOOD! Basically, we have two options about how we are governed. The first option is the easy way, to have government happen to us. Thus, we get the government we deserve. The second more challenging option is where we get a representative government that speaks to our concerns and priorities. It is important to note that, although the Board virtually has no decision making authority at City Hall, CNA certainly has its ear.

I am sure that any issue you want to be considered by the CNA Board of Directors will be heard . . . BUT only if you let us know. An email, letter, showing up at board meetings are all good avenues to get your message heard. One of the surest ways to get action and involvement by the Board is to write to us and let us know what you are concerned about. This is a significant impact when it does come before the Board and, more importantly, when placed on the steps of City Hall.

As Chair, I have the unique opportunity to see how important this organization is to the quality of our lives. I also recognize the shortcomings of 10 board members trying to second guess the will of the people. We need to hear from you either directly or via our official portal, the Concordia News.

Speaking of which . . . The Concordia News is probably the most underutilized and least appreciated community resource we have. Our publisher Mary Wiley has little time or assistance of any sort in getting content (things you really want to know and that are vitally important to the entire community). What we need is an Editor-in-Chief who, as a volunteer, would develop a team to bring neighborhood news and topics of interest. (Did you know that the Concordia News is one of the only neighborhood papers regularly published in Portland? And it reaches 6,500 homes and businesses each month.) We should not have to look outside our neighborhood to find someone who can tell us what is going on here. If you are interested in volunteering, please contact Mary Wiley at (503) 823-4764 or mary.tomkins@portlandoregon.gov.

About Portland's Trees:
Portland Parks & Recreation cares for more than 1.2 million trees in 765 parks and natural areas, and oversees an additional 240,000 street trees across the city. The amount of Portland’s land covered by trees, known as the urban canopy, has increased by nearly 3% during the past nine years. The success is due to efforts undertaken by successful public-private partnerships including the Tree Stewardship Coalition, Portland Parks & Recreation, Friends of Trees and the Bureau of Environmental Services. Currently, 30% of Portland’s surface area is covered in urban forest, with a goal of 37% (per the Urban Forest Management Plan, completed in 2004).

Earth Day Celebration
We’re the Future*
Sat, April 25 (10am-5pm)
Normandale Park (Portland, NE 57th Ave/Halsey Street).
This year’s Earth Day Celebration will feature:
• 90+ sustainable businesses and organizations
• Live music & entertainments
• Kids’ Village & Procession of the Species parade
• The Soupbox Speakers’ Stage
• Health and Wellness Village
• Full effort to recycle all materials!

The Earth Day Celebration brings over 4,000 people to a different community in Portland every year for what is probably the country’s largest community-organized, non-TNC (trans-national corporation) sponsored Earth Day Celebration. The Earth Day Celebration represents the monumental idea of public spaces becoming community places for people to gather for learning, working and most of all, fun!

The Earth Day Celebration is an annual event organized by the Portland Earth Day Coalition, LLC. The Portland Earth Day Coalition is a collection of individuals, organizations, businesses and neighborhood associations that hosts the event. Learn more at: https://earthdaypdx.com/

Earth Day - Arbor Day
Earth Day is honored around the world on April 22, although larger events such as festivals and rallies are often organized for the weekends before or after April 22. Many communities also observe Earth Week or Earth Month, organizing a series of environmental activities throughout the month of April. It was first celebrated in 1970 and celebrated in more than 192 countries each year.

In 1894 a US National Arbor Day was founded by United States Senator Gifford Pinchot as an environmental teach-in first held on April 22, 1915. The first Arbor Day took place on April 10, 1872 in Nebraska. It was the brainchild of Julius Sterling Morton, a Nebraska journalist and politician originally from Michigan. Throughout his long and productive career, Morton worked to improve agricultural techniques in his adopted state and throughout the United States when he served as President Grover Cleveland’s Secretary of Agriculture. But his most important legacy is Arbor Day.

Arbor Day is a holiday in which individuals and groups are encouraged to plant and care for trees. Today, many countries observe such a holiday. Though usually observed in the spring, the date varies, depending on climate and suitable planting seasons. Conservation groups like the Native Tree Society, the American Forestry Association, and the United States Forest Service asked the President to speak to the public school children of the United States about conservation. On April 22, 1907, President Theodore Roosevelt issued an Earth Day Proclamation to the School Children of the United States.

The 2015 Climate Action Plan includes new areas of focus: protecting and expanding our urban canopy; ensuring a low-carbon transportation system; and working toward reducing emissions from the electricity sector. Portland is committed to doing what we can now to achieve a low carbon future and be prepared for the impacts of hotter, drier summers and extremes in precipitation.

As global leaders grapple with the concerns and opportunities the changing climate presents, Portland has become an international destination for planners and decision-makers seeking proven strategies for climate action. Since 2010, more than 160 delegations from around the world have come to Portland to speak with business and government leaders to understand how Portland has lowered its greenhouse gas emissions while continuing to grow and creating a more livable community. Portland and Multnomah County now have 12,000 clean tech jobs, an increase of 25 percent in the past 15 years.

Highlights of the draft Climate Action Plan:

• This summer TriMet will open Tilikum Crossing: Bridge of the People, the largest bridge in the United States to carry people on transit, bikes and on foot, but no cars. To accommodate the potential for higher river levels from climate change, the height of the bridge above the water was increased. The draft plan calls for continued investments that expand active transportation options throughout Portland and ensure those infrastructure investments are resilient to the impacts of climate change.

• Over the last five years, Portland residents have installed more than 2,000 solar systems and more than 2,000 homes have made improvements to their houses. The draft plan calls for doubling solar installations through efforts like community solar and continuing to weatherize homes at a faster rate than ever.

• This spring the Portland City Council will consider an energy management and reporting policy for large commercial buildings. If adopted, the City will work with building owners and managers to access resources to improve the energy performance of these buildings.

• Recent changes to garbage and composting service have led to a 37 percent reduction in garbage headed to the landfill. Residential bills are down two years in a row, while Portland’s recycling rate has reached 70 percent, one of the highest in the nation. Total carbon emissions in the U.S. are up 17 percent since 1990. Here, in Portland and Multnomah County, we’ve reduced emissions by 14 percent, with 30 percent more people and over 75,000 more jobs. We have a lead in a different direction," said Susan Anderson, director of the Bureau of Planning and Sustainability. "The investments that we have made create value as the urban and reduce carbon emissions are the same thing that people want to live here. Creating walkable neighborhoods with shopping, restaurants and parks; investing in transit and bike facilities; and making our homes and buildings more efficient and comfortable.

"Climate change is a threat to the health and wellbeing of our entire community, but will fall harder on those most vulnerable to climate change impacts, including older adults, children, people in poverty and people of color" said John Wasiutynski, director of the Multnomah County Office of Children, Youth and Families. "The County is committed to working with the communities we serve to ensure they are empowered to protect themselves and benefit from climate solutions.

Portland is committed to doing what we can now to achieve a low carbon future and be prepared for the impacts of hotter, drier summers and extremes in precipitation.

Total carbon emissions in the U.S. are up 17 percent since 1990. Here, in Portland and Multnomah County, we’ve reduced emissions by 14 percent, with 30 percent more people and over 75,000 more jobs. We have a lead in a different direction," said Susan Anderson, director of the Bureau of Planning and Sustainability. "The investments that we have made create value as the urban and reduce carbon emissions are the same thing that people want to live here. Creating walkable neighborhoods with shopping, restaurants and parks; investing in transit and bike facilities; and making our homes and buildings more efficient and comfortable.

"Climate change is a threat to the health and wellbeing of our entire community, but will fall harder on those most vulnerable to climate change impacts, including older adults, children, people in poverty and people of color" said John Wasiutynski, director of the Multnomah County Office of Children, Youth and Families. "The County is committed to working with the communities we serve to ensure they are empowered to protect themselves and benefit from climate solutions.

The draft Climate Action Plan includes new areas of focus:

MAIN GALLERY
- Becky Busi draws with breakable sticks on Duralar, which is opaque and doesn’t easily receive ink, allowing the ink to flow into uncontrolled puddles. She uses discarded materials to embellish the drawing to complete the circle of this beautifully imperfect person.
- Rick Grego describes himself as a metal worker. He creates a piece by looking at the negative space in front of the metal and starts drawing in the air with hot metal. Rick finds that the introduction of other materials, expanded his work. Wood, stone and glass were integrated into his works, even today cement is an essential element in many of his sculptures. FEATURE AREA
- Bridget Benton describes her work as Encouraging Mixed Media. Her current body of work explores what is left behind – the evidence that remains after a traumatic experience or a repetitive and soothing ritual. Benton combines encaustic, collage, photographic imagery, and found objects.
- Laura Dufala - She has created woodblock prints that feature Moonscapes”. Her work explores the negative space - with just a sliver visible to our eyes. What is left is so pared down with just the essence of the images and colors left. Moonscapes shows Laura’s attraction to the natural world.
